Submission	Description	Decision
Resub Device	Per pale indented Or and azure, a boar rampant and wyvern erect respectant counterchanged.	Forwarded

The original device was returned on the July 2019 EK LoD

"This device submission is returned for creating the appearance of marshalling. Per SENA A6F2C, "Multiple Types of Primary Charges: When different sections of the field contain different types of charges, it creates the appearance of marshalling."
(<http://heraldry.sca.org/sena.html#A6F2C>) In this case we have a field divided per pale, with different charges on each half. The submitter is advised to consider a redraw that uses identical charges, or perhaps a different type of field division, to remove the appearance of marshaling. "

This redraw changes the line of division to remove the appearance of marshaling.

Resub Device	Argent, a brown stick hobbyhorse proper reined azure and a bordure sable semy of crescents argent	Forwarded

This device was originally returned on the March 2019 LoAR (<http://heraldry.sca.org/loar/2019/03/19-03lar.html#95>):

"This device is returned for lack of contrast between the argent reins of the hobbyhorse and the underlying field. While such details may have low contrast, they cannot have zero contrast.

Upon resubmission, the submitter is advised to make the reins a tincture other than argent, and strongly encouraged to choose a color rather than a metal."

We feel that this redesign addresses the concerns.

Notes:

Iago ab Adam suggests the following reblazon: Argent, a brown stick hobbyhorse issuant from base proper bridled azure, a bordure sable semy of increscents argent.

New Badge	(Fieldless) A stockfish palewise argent	Forwarded

Notes:

This is the defining instance of a stockfish as a charge. ffride wlfssdotter offers the following documentation:

The Government of Iceland notes:

<https://www.government.is/topics/governance-and-national-symbols/icelandic-coat-of-arms/>

"It is not known when a fish (cod), sometimes split and sometimes round, became the emblem of Iceland. Merchants from Hamburg had a cod in their seal around 1500, and likewise the Lubeck merchants in Bergen around 1415. An illustration of a split cod is found in the margin of an Icelandic calfskin manuscript from around 1360 (Stokkhólmsbók, no. 5, fol. in the Royal Library in Stockholm) while Olaus Magnus' map Carta Marina, published in Venice in 1539, portrays a cod on a shield, similar to the later coat of arms.

A meeting of Parliament in 1592 designated lawspeaker Jón Jónsson to present a number of matters to the State Council of Denmark, which held the regency under the infant king Christian IV, including a request for an Icelandic seal, to be in the safekeeping of the governor of Iceland and used in royal business. In a letter to the governor dated May 9, 1593, the State Council says it has granted the request and had a seal made which has been presented to Heinrich Chrag, governor of Iceland, assigning it to his safekeeping and ensuring that it will not be misused.

The seal is made of silver and shows a headless cod with a crown above it, with the date 1593 to one side, with SIGILLVM INSVLÆ ISLANDIÆ in an arc. It is preserved in the National Museum of Iceland (no. 4390), after being presented by the national authorities in 1897.

This is a reliable source about the crowned cod as an emblem of Iceland, which in fact was used before the seal of 1593 was made, for example on Danish gold coins minted in 1591. The cod was incorporated into the Danish royal seal during the reign of Christian IV and remained there until the reign of Frederic VI, with a modification in 1819."

Submission	Description	Decision
Resub device	Per pall inverted argent, sable and azure, a book Or and in base a dolphin argent	Forwarded

Submitter's previous device was returned at Kingdom for redraw
(<https://bth.eastkingdom.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/07/October-30-2018-LoD.pdf>).

"This device is returned for a redraw, for violating provisions of SENA Appendix H - <http://heraldry.sca.org/sena.html#AppendixH>

Specifically, the primary charge (book) overlying the center of the field serves to obscure the field division enough to render it unrecognizable. In addition, SENA Appendix H states that "Some low-contrast complex line combinations which have been ruled unregistrable, even when there is no overlying charge, are: ... Sable and azure."

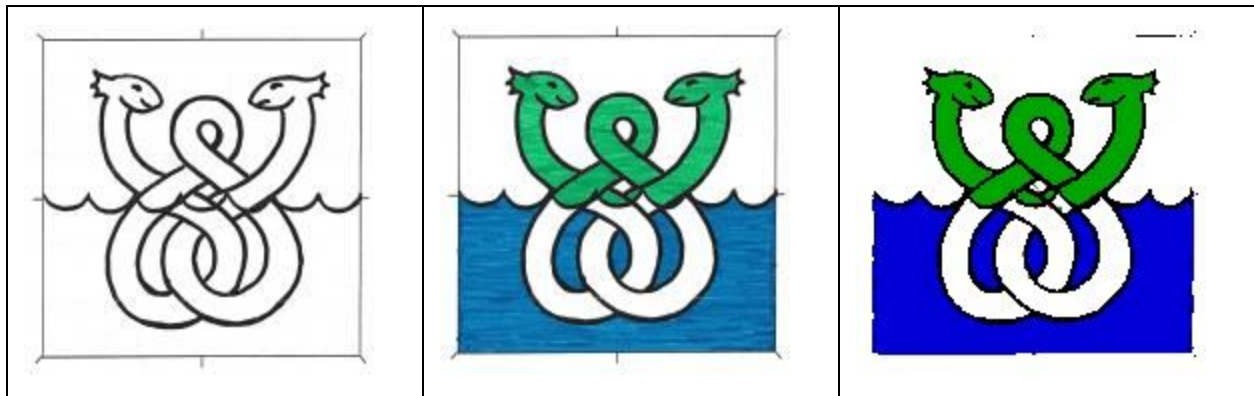

This version removes the wavy line.

Notes:

Iago ab Adam offers the following reblazon: Per pall inverted argent, sable and azure, an open book Or and in base a dolphin haurient to sinister argent.

6. Asther de Perpinya

Submission	Description	Decision
Resub badge	Per fess engrailed argent and azure, a serpent headed at both ends respectant knowed in a Heneage knot inverted counterchanged vert and argent	Forwarded

The original device was returned on the October 2018 LoAR (<http://heraldry.sca.org/loar/2018/10/18-10lar.html#133>):

"This device is returned for lack of documentation of the arrangement of the charges. No evidence was presented and none could be found for having two different kinds of charges issuant from different corners of a chief, as the sun and moon are in this submission.

This device is also returned for redraw. The counterchanged Heneage knot is not centered on the line of division, which is important to its counterchanging.

Concerns were raised in commentary whether or not this was overly pictorial. We decline to rule on the issue at this time; however, the submitter should address this issue if a similar design is resubmitted."

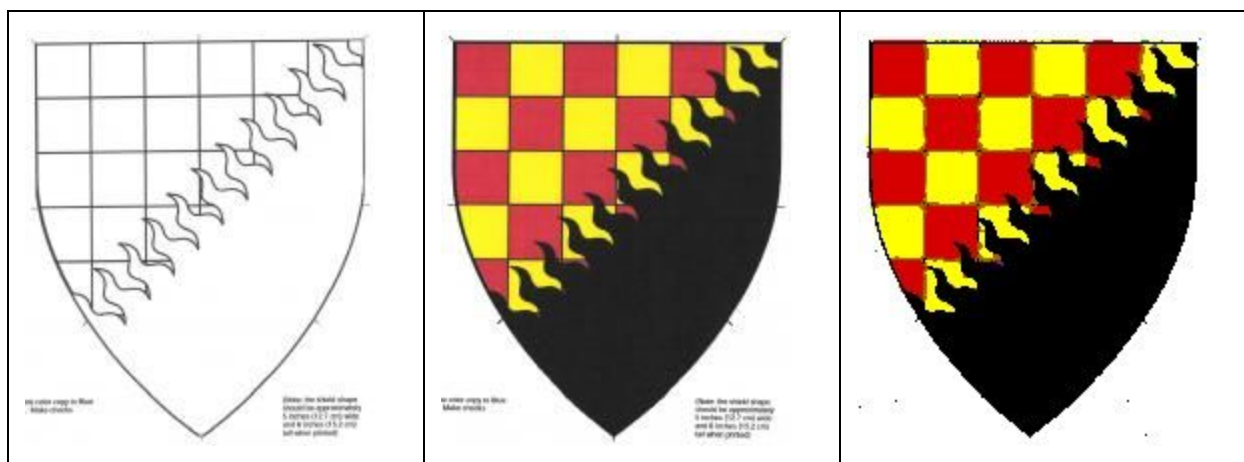

This is a complete redraw, omitting a problematical charges in chief and re-centering the primary charge.

Notes:

Iago ab Adam offers the following reblazon: Per fess engrailed argent and azure, a Heneage knot inverted, ends terminating in serpents' heads counterchanged vert and argent.

11. Finna Hrafnisdóttir

Submission	Description	Decision
Resub Device	Per pale argent and azure, a raven displayed head to sinister and on a chief sable a sword fesswise argent	Forwarded

This device was returned on the May EK LoD:

"This device is returned for use of a disallowed posture, striking affronty. An example of many returns from precedent, the return of Sarra the Gipsie's device from March 2000: 'The posture striking affronty is not allowed as it is not known in period armory and is inherently three-dimensional. The feet of the raven are not set to either side of the tail, which is one of the definitions of a displayed posture, but are instead overlying the tail. This is therefore not "displayed" but instead "striking affronty."'

In addition, the asymmetry of the wings and lack of internal detailing caused some confusion among commenters. We encourage the submitter to use a more symmetrical bird for their redraw, include some internal detailing on the color version, and draw the feet properly out to either side of the tail."

We believe this redraw addresses these concerns.

There is an SFPP for the use of a raven displayed.

Notes:

Iago ab Adam offers the following reblazon: Per pale argent and azure, a raven displayed head to sinister and on a chief sable a sword argent.

Resub Device Change	Argent, a crow rising sable and a fox rampant proper addorsed and on a chief triangular azure a rose argent	Forwarded

Old Item: Per bend azure and argent, a rose argent and a fox salient proper, on a chief argent three martlets sable, to be released.

This device change was originally returned on the April 2016 LoAR

(<https://heraldry.sca.org/loar/2016/04/16-04lar.html#136>):

"This device is returned administratively for using an altered form. The shape of the shield is significantly different from the shape defined on the Laurel-approved form. On resubmission, the submitter should be made aware that the fox here is not proper, as blazoned on the Letter of Intent, which would have the socks sable and only the tip of the tail argent. As depicted here, it is returnable for contrast issues."

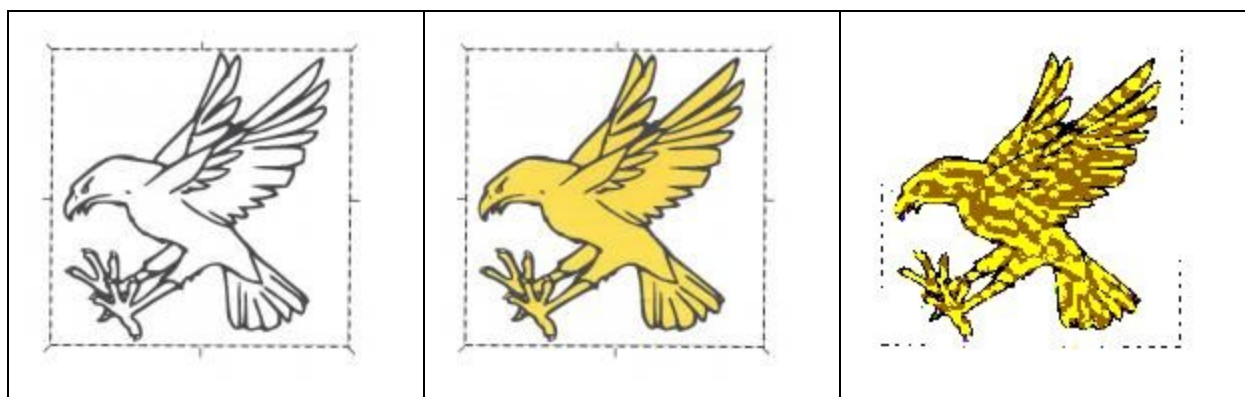

While the original artwork has a very grey shade of blue, OSCAR correctly identifies it as blue in the color-corrected image.

Notes:

Iago ab Adam offers the following reblazon: Argent, in fess a crow rising sable and a fox rampant to sinister proper, on a chief triangular azure a rose argent.

The submitter has approved the spelling change from her originally submitted "Rafndottir" to the version more supported by the documentation.

Submission	Description	Decision
Resub Device	Sable, a monkey sejant erect contourny	Forwarded

	argent maintaining a wine dipper Or and on a chief argent three pomegranates gules

This device was originally returned on the June 2018 LoAR (<http://heraldry.sca.org/loar/2018/06/18-06lar.html#169>):

"This device must be returned for violation of SENA A2C1, which requires that charges must be depicted in a period style. In the November 2017 return of the device of Michele dei Medici, it was noted: "The ladle is likewise not drawn in a period form. The ladles we see in period images had the handle parallel to the lip, not at right angles to it. No evidence was provided and none could be found for the depiction of a ladle in the submitted configuration." This depiction matches that used by Michele, and must likewise be returned."

This is a redraw with different shape of the utensil, with documentation of it as a wine dipper.

Submission	Description	Decision
Resub Name Change	Rayya bint Estani	Forwarded

Old Item: Katriona Silverswan, to be released.

Submitter desires a feminine name.

Sound (sound of RAY-uh) most important.

The name "Rayya al Amiriya" was returned at the kingdom level in December of 2010. This is a resubmission.

Rayya is found in "PERIOD ARABIC NAMES AND NAMING PRACTICES" by Da'ud ibn Auda in the list of period feminine isms. (<http://www.heraldry.sca.org/names/arabic-naming2.htm>) bint is the marker for a patronymic byname as discussed in the above referenced Da'ud article.

Estani is a (Christian) masculine given name found in the list of men's names in "Sixteenth-Century Turkish Names" by Ursula Witcher.

(<https://www.s-gabriel.org/names/ursula/ottoman/masculine.html>)

The name pattern is documented in SENA Appendix A.

23. Thora Kottr

New Device	Per chevron sable and Or, an increscent, a decrescent and a domestic cat rampant	Forwarded

Kottr is an Old Norse byname found in Geirr Bassi p. 25 as kǫttr. "kottr" is the the standard spelling using modern English characters.

While it is preferred that the black and white version be a line drawing only, it is acceptable for the black portions to be solid.

24. Þorfinnr Hróðgeirsson

Submission	Description	Decision
New Name Change	Þorfinnr Hróðgeirsson	Forwarded

Old Item: Þórfinnr Hróðgeirsson, to be released.

Submitter desires a masculine name.

No changes.

Sound (none noted) most important.

The original name was registered with the long ó in Þórfinnr. The submitter has learned from Old Norse lecturer and expert Dr. Jackson Crawford of the University of Colorado, Boulder, that the long o is incorrect. It should be a short o, as the second component of the name /finnr/ begins with a consonant. The following You Tube video by Dr. Crawford explains this.

<https://youtu.beNnuNWq0h1zc?t=362>

Of the 21 instances of Þorfinnr in the Landnamabok, (~1300 ce, <https://www.snerpa.is/net/snorri/landnama.html>) they all lack the accent on the o, despite accents being used throughout the text and on other <Thor> names which have an initial vowel in the second syllable, like Þórunni and Þórarinn. A page is attached here that shows the text with examples highlighted.

Similarly, in the Orkneyinga saga

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20180220033852/https://norse.ulver.com/src/konung/orkney/on.ht>
ml) we only see Þórfinnr without the long o, while other Thor names have it when the second syllable begins with a vowel.

The argument used to add the accent at registration was that the accent should match the accent in the byname, but the long o there is consistent with extant texts, and Hróðgeir appears consistently in the Landnamabok with an accent on the o.

Notes:

Originally submitted as a name change, this is actually a Request for Name Reconsideration. The original name was submitted using Geirr Bassi as documentation, and was registered with the long ó in Þórfinnr. The argument used to add the accent at registration was that the accent should match the accent in the byname, but the long o there is consistent with extant texts, and Hróðgeir appears consistently in the Landnamabok with an accent on the o. It is believed that the accent found in Geirr Bassi is a transcription error.

The desired unaccented spelling is found in Lind col. 1158 sn. Þorfinnr.

The submitter prefers the version without the accent.

25. Tyffayne de Trumpington

Submission	Description	Decision
Resub Device	Azure, on a unicorn's head erased argent armed within an orle of paw prints Or a dove gules	Forwarded

The original submission was returned on the January 2019 LOAR (<http://heraldry.sca.org/loar/2019/01/19-01lar.html#198>):

"This device is returned for redraw. Commenters had trouble identifying the charges in orle as paw prints, due largely to the size and style of their depiction.

Upon resubmission, please depict the paw prints larger and with a more distinctly paw print shape to aid in identifiability.

There is a step from period practice for the use of paw prints."

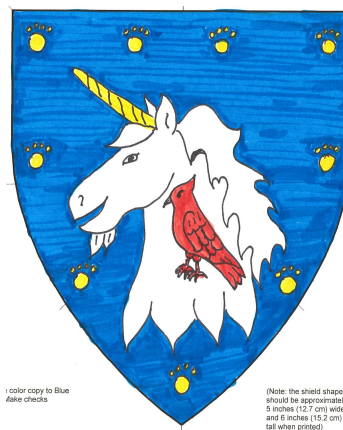

This submission alters the size and shape of the paw prints to make them more identifiable. There is an SFPP for the use of paw prints.

Notes:

Kingdom commenters were concerned that this dove could be mistaken for a cardinal. We find this bird to be drawn acceptably similar to the dove from the online Pic Dic

(<https://mistholme.com/?s=dove>) and Heraldicart.org

(<http://heraldicart.org/dove/>), including the flourish of feathers on top of its head. This is the same bird emblazon from the original submission, where there was no commentary about identifiability.

Notes:

Kingdom commentary raised the concern that the submitted emblazon lacks the type of symmetry that seems characteristic of the provided examples. In addition, the stylized drawing of the dragon head was cause for concern. Lacking the expertise in-kingdom for this type of IAP, we commend this submission to Wreath for consideration.
